The Purim Story

For 2-6 year olds:

A long time ago, many Jewish people lived in the country of Persia. The king loved to give big parties in his palace. At one of his parties, he wanted the queen to dance for his guests, but she did not want to so she said no. The king got so angry that she wouldn't do what he said, so he sent her away and started to look for a new queen. He chose a beautiful and kind woman named Esther and she became the new queen. She was Jewish, but the king didn't know it.

One day, the king's helper, a mean and greedy man named Haman was walking down the street and telling everyone to bow down to him. One man said he would not bow. He said, "I am a Jew and I don't bow to anyone!" This brave man's name was Mordechai and he was Queen Esther's cousin.

This made Haman angry and he decided to punish all the Jews. One night, Esther invited the King and Haman to a party so that she could tell the King in front of Haman that he planned to hurt her.

"I don't want to hurt you," exclaimed Haman, "You are my Queen."

"Well, you want to hurt the Jewish people and I am Jewish!" The King was shocked. He had no idea that his queen was a Jew! He immediately took Haman's job away and sent him away. The Jews were very happy. They sang and danced and gave big parties, which is how we celebrate the holiday of Purim today.

"Nobody says 'no' to the King! Vashti will no longer be my queen!" Ahashverosh sent Vashti away from the palace and called all young women to the palace so that he could choose a new queen. One was a Jewish girl named Esther. She did not want to go, but her cousin, Mordechai, said she must.

The King chose the beautiful and kind Esther to be his queen. Meanwhile, Haman, a selfish, mean, and greedy man who was the King's assistant, would walk down the streets and tell everyone to bow down to him. People were afraid of him so they bowed down to him as he ordered. But there was one man who refused to.

"I won't bow down to any man," he said, "I bow down only to my God." This brave man was Queen Esther's cousin Mordechai! Haman decided to punish all the Jews because of Mordechai, without knowing that Queen Esther was Jewish or that she was Mordechai's cousin.

One day, Mordechai was standing outside the palace walls when he overheard two guards whispering about harming the King. Mordechai warned the King and saved him. The King was grateful and to reward Mordechai, gave him his best clothes to wear and told Haman to lead him through the streets of Shushan on the King's beautiful horse. This made Haman even angrier and more determined to punish all the Jews. One night, Esther invited the King and Haman to a party so that she could tell the King in front of Haman that he planned to hurt her.

"I don't want to hurt you," exclaimed Haman, "You are my Queen."

"Well," responded Esther, "you want to hurt the Jewish people and I am Jewish!" The King was shocked. He had no idea that his queen was a Jew! He immediately took Haman's job away from him and gave it to Mordechai.

The Jews were very happy. They sang and danced and gave big parties, which is how we celebrate the holiday of Purim today.

For ages 7+

A long time ago, many Jewish people lived in the city of Shushan in the country of Persia. The king and queen of this country were named King Ahashverosh (A-hash-vay-rosh). and Queen Vashti. King Ahashverosh loved to give big parties in his palace. At one of his parties, he wanted Queen Vashti to dance for his guests. Vashti did not want to dance, so she sent a message that she would not attend the King's party.

Purim Celebrations around the World

In a Sephardic synagogue in London, England, congregants write the name of Haman on a paper and erase it when his name is read.

In France, children took smooth stones and would write or engrave Haman's name on them, and strike them together during the Megillah reading whenever Haman's name was mentioned, in order to erase it.

Jews in Salonika, a city in Greece, bake "Haman-shaped" cakes on the eve of the Shabbat before Purim and place them on the window ledges until the festive Purim meal. During the meal, the cakes resliced so that participants can "devour Haman".

In Bukhara, Uzbekistan, the ground is usually covered with snow at Purim. A snow-Haman is built next to the synagogue. After the Purim meal, the community gathers around the Haman and a large fire is made of wood, rags and paper. They stand and watch until Haman melts in the heat and disappears, singing until it is completely melted.

In North America, Purim is traditionally celebrated with the reading of the megillah (Purim story), carnivals with prizes and games for children, and festive costume parades.

In Mumbai, India Purim is celebrated by singing, 'Esther Ranichi Katha' — the tale of Queen Esther — sung to Hindu temple tunes accompanied by musical instruments like Dholak and Harmonium.

The Festival of Santa Esterica is a holiday that was created as a substitute for Purim by the Sephardic Jews forced to convert to Catholicism after their expulsion from Spain in the late 15th century. It is still celebrated today in parts of the Southwestern United States and Latin America. The festival is about a fictional "Catholic" saint called "Esterica" who was heavily based upon Queen Esther.

Jews in Morocco bake challahs called Ojos de Haman (Haman's eyes), which include almonds and two unpeeled hard-boiled eggs.

Even if you sometimes feel scared or worried, you can still access Ometz Lev at any time. It’s also important to remember that sometimes it takes courage to not move forward when you feel scared. Listening to your heart and your body and pausing when there is fear and anxiety can be difficult and Ometz Lev may also mean having the courage to take a moment and regroup.

Purim Food Around the World

Would you try any of these Purim foods from across the globe?

Italian Jews eat vegetable pastry turnover called Buricche. It symbolizes the vegan diet Esther kept in the palace, enabling her to hide her Jewish identity.

Iraqi Jews prepare baaba cookies and sambusak, which is a protein-filled dough that's deep-fried and full of aromatic flavor.

Jews in Bulgaria eat Caveos di Aman, a dish consisting of olives and hard-boiled eggs served with stringy pasta, representing Haman's hair.

Jews in France eat palmiers, a pastry symbolizing Haman's misshapen ears.

Greek Jews enjoy a bread called folares. It's meant to symbolize Haman's head. Its dough is wrapped around a hard-boiled egg.

Jews in North America eat hamantaschen. It may refer to "Haman's tash" (the Yiddish word for "pocket"), which held money to bribe King Achashverosh. It also may refer to the shape of Haman's hat or his bent ears.

Keep Learning: Mishloach Manot

Mishloach Manot [meesh-LOE-akh mah-NOTE] means "sending portions to one another." It is a phrase taken from the Megillah [Book of Esther] that commands the Jewish community to give small packages of food or gifts to friends on the day of Purim.

There are two explanations for why this commandment might exist. The first explanation is because Haman accused the Jews of being "a scattered, and divided nation." So, Jewish people send gifts to each other in order to show that they are not divided, but united.

Another explanation is that so that everyone can fulfill the mitzvah of eating a proper, festive meal on Purim.

Make a Mishloach Manot Basket

Materials: 8x10 sheet of colored paper, scissors, glue stick, tissue paper or coffee filter

Holding the paper horizontally, fold it in half four times and then unfold.

Cut on all the fold lines, creating 16 strips. (This will be enough for two baskets with 2 left over)

Make a "+" with two strips and glue them together at the center.

Make an "x" with two more and glue those on top at the center, making an "*"

Cut one of the remaining strips in half and glue that half onto another strip (this will be the ring and it will be 1.5 strips long.)

Glue the ends of the strip to make a circle and place it in the middle of the "*"

Bend and then glue the ends of the strips to the outside of the band, all the way around.

Glue the ends of the last strip onto the inside of the band to create the handle.

Line the bottom of your Mishloach Manot basket with tissue paper or a coffee filter and then fill it with treats to share with a friend!

Purim Spiels

What is a Purim Spiel?

Spiel is a Yiddish word meaning a “play” or “skit.” A Purim spiel actually tells the story of the Book of Esther, giving people an opportunity to cheer the heroes (Mordecai and Esther) and boo the villains (Haman).

Purim spiels are usually funny skits that include popular songs with rewritten lyrics that poke fun at current events or popular people. Some spiels are small readings and others are big productions with costumes, music, and props.

The Purim Spiel often takes a look at world politics with various world leaders playing the roles of heroes and villains and is an opportunity to present a Jewish version of political justice in the world.

Have you ever seen or been in a Purim spiel? Maybe you could use the paper doll activity on the next page and create your own version of a spiel!
